

HealthWorkers 4all

If the situation remains as it is today, one billion people world-wide will never see a health worker in their life.

Today over 50 countries, mainly in Africa and South Asia, suffer from a critical shortage of health personnel, while they carry a large part of the global burden of disease. In the aging societies of European countries, the number of people who need long-term care is growing, thus fuelling demand for health workers. As the labor market becomes more globalized, rising demand is driving migration and mobility amongst health personnel. The recruitment of health workers abroad is a way of meeting the domestic demand, but can worsen the shortage of qualified personnel in both low- and middle-income countries and Europe.

The project «Health workers for all and all for health workers» calls upon politicians and policymakers to implement the Code of Practice on the International Recruitment of Health Personnel.

Through advocacy and campaigning, we contribute from Europe to a sustainable health workforce worldwide. We focus on lasting improvements in national, European and global policy, such as compliance with international agreements that benefit human resources for health.

We develop and share tools for policy analysis and (inter)action to increase knowledge and understanding of human resources for health from a global health perspective.
